The sun makes a yearly journey from north to south.

When it ~~it~~ reaches its southernmost point and is by Aztec belief, in danger of crashing into the earth and ending existence this point becomes ~~extremely~~ a vital spot for its propitiation.

I think that the great monument of the fifth and last sun - the calendar stone was placed at this southern point, in front of Montezumas palace on its southern side — in fact very near where it was ^{buried place} discovered ~~buried~~ in 1790.

Since the fifth sun was by legendary belief deemed to be the final one, ^{the one} upon whose ending would come the destruction.

of all existence and since the Tlatoani ^{and} ~~was~~ the Cihuacoatl were the prime custodians of its propitiation ~~their~~ ^{its} patrons, the placement of this monument in front of both their palaces and in the public dance square would reinforce this idea.
