Dear Scott and Stuart:

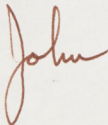

Thank you for the loan of the enclosed article, which we found fascinating. I did not return it to you earlier as I wanted to be able to show your other work in color, and the paintings did not reproduce very well in Xerox, of course.

Reactions to the Tenochtitlan painting continue very enthusiastic, and people inevitably want more. I am enclosing a Kodachrome slide of it as both blow-ups to paper print stock I had made for you did not turn out as well as I expected. I am going to try again this week but maybe the slide will always be sharper and more impressive?

Please let me know your opinions about the Geographic article. That magazine has gone downhill so much lately that I never know what to expect. The diagrams of the Templo Mayor seemed worth it though, along with some of the photographs of offerings found at the base of the pyramid.

I will have more slides etc. for you in the near future. Let us hear how things are going for you both.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "John", with a stylized, flowing script.
